Sedona, Ariz. — Corporate America will soon get up close and personal with adventure racing, specifically, how group dynamics play a part in achieving success when Ninth House Network chronicles one team's journey during Four Winds' Mountain Rage '00/Lake Mead Nov. 4-5.

The San Francisco-based company will follow team Dawg/4Winds (Kiviok Hight, Ron Kelly, Ann Motokaitis, Bill Watters) throughout the race as it mountain bikes, treks, paddles and rappels through the nearly 100-mile rugged course of the Lake Mead region that shoulders Nevada and Arizona. The segment will be part of an interactive e-learning program titled "Performing in Teams" that also will feature other high-performing teams as the Mars Pathfinder crew at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Industrial Light & Magic Commercial Productions, Spruce Technologies and the San Francisco Mime Troupe.

Available to Fortune 1000 companies, Ninth House Network is the only broadband e-learning environment for corporate development that maximizes interactive, personalized and engaging programs delivered directly to the desktop via broadband technology, providing employees with on-demand access to relevant and timely business role-playing simulation, instant advice, a networked community of peers and personalized virtual mentors.

Ninth House has worked with more than 50 major private and public organizations, including First Union National Bank, Empire Blue Cross and Blue Shield, Media One, Black & Decker and the Department of Justice to achieve meaningful organizational change through employee development of critical business skills. Mountain Rage '00/Lake Mead is the final race of the Four Winds Adventure Company's 2000 Mountain Rage adventure race championship series. Teams have been accumulating points throughout the year, beginning with the series' first race at Lake Roosevelt, Ariz., followed by competitions at Clear Lake (Northern California) and Ventura County (Southern California). Top points leaders Epinephrine, Dawg/4Winds and Santa Fe are vying for the Mountain Rage 2000 championship title that will be determined at Lake Mead.
