Sedona, Ariz. — Summer may be over come September, but the adventures will continue with the Four Winds Adventure Company's two-day Mountain Rage Series races.

First up is Mountain Rage/Clear Lake, Sept. 29-30. Fresh on the heels of Four Winds '01: The USA Supreme Adventure Race/Idaho (Aug. 4-12), Clear Lake will mark a return to one of Northern California's most lush and pristine forested regions. Four Winds is looking forward to duplicating the success of last year's Mountain Rage race in the area, which was buoyed by outstanding regional support from local search and rescue teams and the Coast Guard.

Capping off the season is Mountain Rage/Lake Mead, Nov. 3-4, which can only mean big water. With hundreds of miles of coastline from which to create a course, the Lake Mead adventure offers racers a one-of-a-kind endurance kayaking experience unusual for a two-day event. Working cooperatively with the Bureau of Land Management, National Park Service and state, county and local agencies, this popular Mountain Rage race delivers one of the most diverse terrains, featuring petroglyph-painted slot canyons, steep mountain goat trails and moon-type landscapes against one of the largest manmade waterways in the country.

Multiday adventures remain Four Winds' main focus as it continues developing new races throughout the West staffed by an expert race management, permit and development team with more than five years of adventure racing development and production experience in the United States. The USA Supreme Adventure Race and Mountain Rage series have been held on and been granted access to more types of permitted lands than most adventure racing organizations, offering unparalleled diversity to its Four Winds participants.
